CITY PROVIDES LIFE-SAVING TIPS AND INFORMATION FOR EL NIÑO

SAN GABRIEL, CA – With El Niño storms just beginning and expected to only get worse this winter, the City of San Gabriel has launched a special webpage to provide residents with important emergency preparedness information.

People who live and work in San Gabriel can visit www.sangabrielcity.com/elnino to find tips on how to protect themselves and their property during severe weather. The site also gives residents the tools to stay safe during a rainstorm event, such as important phone numbers.

The information on the city site has also be distributed throughout the city in a flyer, which has been translated into Chinese and Spanish. The translated flyers are also posted to the webpage.

Residents are also encouraged to sign up to receive alerts and information from the Fire Department through the city's emergency notification system, SG Alert. Sign up at www.sangabrielcity.com/sgalert.

As Southern California faces the most severe rainy season in years, the city aims to keep residents and businesses safe and prevent damage to all city infrastructure. All city departments have worked hard to prepare for El Niño, and now the city is providing residents with the tools and information they need to do the same.
